

My report on The Visit to the Police Station

On the 5th February we went to the police HQ station where we found out some interesting facts about the police and their role in the community and we played with some things.

The facts I learnt are that in the olden days the police men wore a top hat, which meant "I'm here to help you" and because the hat was so tall people could see them in a crowd and they could store their food in it. Now they have a metal pole which they hit you in two different places, the thigh and your shoulder because that's where your largest muscle is, and the hand coves use to have a chain in the middle but because the criminals kept on braking out of them the kept the chain but put a bit of metal over it so it wont move however the also had a vest for someone that would go up to hit them and if a person had done something really bad they would be shipped of to Australia for 15 years as punishment

I played with a few things, but my most favourite thing was the puzzle because people in the scout pack come to help but they went away in boredom. I managed to finish it during the night then I went to play with the faces, to make them right.
